Here are a few tips on how to raise your babies in the 3rd millennium:

1. Be present

One of the most important things you can do for your baby is to be present. This means being physically and emotionally available for them. Make time to play with them, read to them, and talk to them. Let them know that you love them and that you're there for them no matter what.

2. Be patient

Babies are going to make mistakes. They're going to cry, they're going to get fussy, and they're going to have accidents. It's important to be patient with them and to understand that they're still learning. Don't get discouraged if they don't always do things the way you want them to. Just keep loving them and supporting them, and they'll eventually get there.

3. Be consistent

Babies need routine and consistency. This helps them to feel secure and loved. Try to establish a regular schedule for feedings, naps, and playtime. And be consistent with your rules and expectations. This will help your baby to learn what is expected of them and to behave accordingly.

4. Be positive

Babies are very sensitive to your emotions. If you're stressed or anxious, they'll pick up on it and they'll start to feel stressed and anxious too. It's important to stay positive and upbeat around your baby. This will help them to feel happy and secure.

5. Be yourself

The most important thing you can do for your baby is to be yourself. Don't try to be someone you're not. Your baby will love you for who you are, not for who you pretend to be. So be yourself, and enjoy the journey of parenthood.

Additional tips for raising babies in the 3rd millennium

- Make use of technology. There are many great apps and websites that can help you to track your baby's progress, find local resources, and connect with other parents.
- Get involved in your community. There are many great programs and activities that can help you to connect with other parents and to learn more about child development.
- Take care of yourself. Parenting is a demanding job, so it's important to take care of yourself. Make sure to get enough sleep, eat healthy foods, and exercise regularly.

Parenting in the 3rd millennium is a challenge, but it's also an amazing journey. By following these tips, you can help your baby to thrive in the years to come.
