Jules Wake is a force of nature. As an educator, entrepreneur, and advocate, she has dedicated her life to promoting equity in education. Her unwavering commitment to ensuring that all students have access to high-quality educational opportunities has made her a trailblazer in the field.

In this article, we will explore Jules Wake's journey and the profound impact she has had on the field of education. We will learn about her early life, her work as an educator, her entrepreneurial ventures, and her advocacy work.

Early Life and Education

Jules Wake was born in New York City to Jamaican immigrant parents. From a young age, she was exposed to the power of education. Her parents instilled in her a love of learning and a belief that anything was possible if she worked hard.

Wake attended public schools in New York City and went on to earn a bachelor's degree in political science from Howard University. She then earned a master's degree in education from Columbia University.

Career as an Educator

Wake began her career as a teacher in the New York City public school system. She quickly realized that many students were not receiving the support they needed to succeed. She was determined to make a difference.

In 1997, Wake founded the nonprofit organization, the Coalition for Educational Equity. The coalition's mission is to promote equity and excellence in education for all students, regardless of race, ethnicity, gender, or socioeconomic status.

Through the coalition, Wake has worked to provide educational opportunities for underserved students. She has also advocated for policies that promote equity in education.

Entrepreneurial Ventures

In addition to her work as an educator, Wake is also a successful entrepreneur. She is the co-founder and CEO of the education technology company, EVERFI.

EVERFI provides online educational programs that are used by schools and universities around the world. The programs cover a wide range of topics, including financial literacy, health, and career readiness.

Through EVERFI, Wake is reaching millions of students and helping them to succeed in school and beyond.

Advocacy Work

Wake is a passionate advocate for equity in education. She has testified before Congress and spoken at numerous conferences and events. She has also written extensively on the importance of equity in education.

Wake's advocacy work has helped to raise awareness of the challenges facing underserved students. She has also helped to shape policies that are making a difference in the lives of students.

Awards and Recognition

Wake's work has been recognized with numerous awards and honors. She has been named one of the "100 Most Influential People in Education" by the Education Week magazine. She has also received the prestigious Heinz Award for her work in education equity.

Jules Wake is an independent mind who has dedicated her life to promoting equity in education. As an educator, entrepreneur, and advocate, she has made a significant impact on the lives of countless students and educators.

Wake's work is a reminder that we all have a role to play in ensuring that all students have access to high-quality educational opportunities. We must all be willing to speak out for equity and to work towards creating a more just and equitable world.
