1. Change your oil regularly. This is one of the most important things you can do to keep your car running smoothly. Oil lubricates moving parts and helps to prevent wear and tear. It also helps to keep your engine clean. The recommended oil change interval varies depending on the make and model of your car, but most manufacturers recommend changing it every 5,000 to 7,500 miles.
2. Check your tire pressure regularly. Underinflated tires can cause a number of problems, including decreased fuel efficiency, poor handling, and premature tire wear. Overinflated tires can also be dangerous, as they are more likely to blow out. The recommended tire pressure for your car can be found on the tire placard located on the driver's side door jamb. Check your tire pressure at least once a month, and adjust it as needed.

3. Get regular tune-ups. A tune-up can help to improve your car's performance and fuel efficiency. It can also help to identify and fix minor problems before they become major ones. The recommended tune-up interval varies depending on the make and model of your car, but most manufacturers recommend getting one every 30,000 to 60,000 miles.
4. Wash your car regularly. Washing your car helps to remove dirt, salt, and other corrosive substances that can damage the paint and body. It also helps to prevent the buildup of rust. Wash your car at least once a month, and more often if you live in an area with harsh weather conditions.
5. Wax your car regularly. Waxing your car helps to protect the paint from the elements and makes it easier to wash. It also helps to give your car a showroom shine. Wax your car every 3 to 6 months, or more often if you live in an area with harsh weather conditions.
6. Inspect your car regularly. Take some time each month to inspect your car for any signs of wear or damage. Check the tires, brakes, lights, and fluids. If you find anything that needs to be fixed, take care of it right away. This will help to prevent small problems from becoming big ones.

By following these simple tips, you can help to make your car last longer and run more smoothly. Taking care of your car is one of the best ways to protect your investment.
